The fact that Memorial day is a legal holiday enables persons both in the federal and private employ, together with the pupils in the various schools to unite in laying on the graves of these honored dead emblems of their respect and affection and in listening to patriotic and eloquent speeches by distinguished men, including the President of the United States.

The graves both of the known and the unknown dead will alike be decorated by their former comrades in arms, their possible relatives and their undoubted admirers.

The "national Sabbath," as it has been styled by many, was instituted by Gensyled by many, was instituted by Gensyled for the Grand Army of the Republic, in an order issued in 1868.
